Jimmy Wilson Films was chosen as recipient of the Parents Television Council Seal of Approval for its Children's Series of DVDs. Jimmy Wilson, who wrote, produced, and hosts the DVD series, will receive the honor during the Council's Seal awards ceremony in Los Angeles on July 7, 2008.

Jimmy Wilson is also a pilot of a floatplane. He's a kind of Mr. Rogers meets Roy Rogers persona who invites the viewer along on engaging adventures that manage to be ultimately fascinating, educational and include interviews with experts. "White Bear," for example, takes the viewer on a virtual trip to see how polar bears live up close in the "Polar Bear Capital of the World," Churchill, Manitoba.

According to the Parents Television Council announcement, "Jimmy Wilson Films promotes positive values such as respect for the environment and exploration, these eight episodes feature engaging footage and informative commentary from experts. We at the Parents Television Council are proud to stand behind such high quality family entertainment, and we look forward to future episodes."
